eball61 11/16/2023

SW Padlet 2: Sharing Good Practice

Are there any areas where there is good practice you want to share in relation to multi-agency working?

Some good communication and information sharing at points and in certain circumstances

♡ 0

Schools are generally very good with information sharing and providing updates

♡ 1

Information sharing between education and social care

♡ 0

Some professional dedicated to families and children they work with.

♡ 1

---

when you build good relationships this leads to good communication and best practice

♡ 1

Schools can have a massive impact

♡ 0

Schools are usually good for consistency with being able provide good chronology's and information from historic involvement where there has been changes in social workers

♡ 0

Education

Local reviews have consistently shown some of the exceptional practice in primary and secondary schools to support children and their families

♡ 0

When you've developed a relationship with a particular practitioner involved with a family that you're working with (mental health) helps enormously

- improves the communication, the transparency etc. Especially helps with the soft intelligence.

♡ 2

Once child is under child protection, I often find there then often is good working, everyone in attendance etc.

♡ 0

Linking in with all professionals at the beginning, building good working relationships and ensuring everyone understands their role to play for the child/children

♡ 1

Some good reflective social workers out there.

♡ 1

Having contact details for professionals involved is good with being able to keep everyone involved and information shared

♡ 1

I've worked with some schools with teachers or support staff having to go above and beyond, visits in the evening, providing food for families or half term clubs for kids as a safe space

♡ 2

Education
Good transferring across areas and schools

♡ 0

Advocacy services supporting and assisting for the rights of those struggling to understand what is happening their life. All too often we hear how people don't fully understand what's happening between services.

♡ 0

Local Supported Housing charity going above and beyond to support and update on safeguarding issues with vulnerable yps to help prevent & identify issues of concern

♡ 1

CP conferences seem to firm up the responsibility of information sharing professionals which is positive

♡ 1

A culture of professional curiosity, asking questions, and having professional meetings to discuss the case and evaluate planning has been really helpful.

♡ 0

Complex safeguarding teams usually really good at inviting professionals to meetings, building rapport with young people, sharing reports

♡ 0

---

schools have a generic email facilitates better engagement and communication

♡ 1

Some good partnership and agreed actions/ outcomes/ expectations.

♡ 1